Dora Conner retires here

By FRANCES PAULETTE

A host of family, friends, co-workers and school officials gathered in the cafeteria of the Appomattox Primary School on Monday, May 30, to honor Mrs. Dora (L. Evrod) Conner, who is retiring after 17 years as a member of the APS cafeteria staff.

"Dora and I have shared many happy years together," said Mrs. Annie Laurie Babcock, long time friend and a retired co-worker.

Dora's association with the school system goes back to 1952 when she worked with Mrs. Babcock at the old Appomattox High School. She was a part of that cafeteria staff for eight years.

In 1960 Conner began working with Poe Hardware Co. and remained there until 1966.

Dora's love of children prompted her to return to work with the school system; this time in the cafeteria at Appomattox Primary School.

"We first started our work together when we were at the old high school with 12 grades," said Babcock with a smile.

"We cooked on a coal burning stove with ashes, soot and smoke; it was especially bad on Monday mornings. But, we never failed to have lunch on time."

Dora Abbitt Conner, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Francis Abbitt Sr. was born at Gravel Knoll, the Abbitt property formerly known as the Old Webb Place.

Along with the family of six, Dora attended New Hope Baptist Church, going to and from the services in a Model T. Ford. Still an active member of the same church, she is active in Sunday School, WMU, Outreach, and other church related activities.

Being a good neighbor and doing for others comes naturally to Dora Conner .... she's always been a caring person. A younger brother commented on her caring attitude.

"Dora's always been a caring person, always caring about other people," commented Herbert Abbitt, a local pharmacist.

"When we were little, I could always count on Dora to be my protector!" Abbitt commented with a laugh.

Dora Conner attended Vera Elementary School and Appomattox Agricultural High School (later it became Appomattox High School). She was valedictorian of her graduating class.

In order to attend classes at the high school, Dora had to live during the week at the high school dormitory, a housing facility located adjacent to the school. This dormitory provided accomodations for students from surrounding areas as well as Appomattox County.

Married at an early age to L. Evrod Conner, an Appomattox County native, the Conners have two children, Mrs. Bolling Conner Carter and Mrs. Ottie Conner Osborne and three grandchildren, R.B. Carter, Beth Carter and Stella Osborne.

"Dora has been our greatest blessing in so many ways," commented Mrs. Annie Laurie Babcock, "but especially with our finances. She has counted many thousands of dollars during all her years with the cafeteria staff and her figures always came out right, mine nearly always came out wrong!"

"We enjoyed every minute of every day of our work together and wish we were young enough to start all over again," added Babcock.

"Everybody loves Dora," Babcock concluded.

Notes on storing clothes

By OCIE M. MACK
Extension Agent

Do not store clothing during the summer in the plastic bags provided by the dry cleaner as the bags tend to hold moisture that can produce mildew and the fumes from cleaning solutions may be trapped inside plastic covers.

The result could be fading of certain colors, particularly blue. Brown paper or a fabric garment bag with plenty of ventilating holes can be used to cover the item.

Mothballs or crystal should not come in contact with the fabrics because they may cause discoloration. Mothproofing cakes hung in an enclosed area often work well but it is essential that mothproofing products and the woolens be placed in an air-tight closet, locker or box.

The fumes of the napthalene or paradiclorobensyne will not do their work on moths if the fumes escape as closets and lockers are opened. In recent years, dry cleaners have stopped using moth-proofing chemicals in the cleaning process, partly because the chemicals have proven environmentally harmful.

Some fabrics are permanently moth-proofed by the manufacturers but the best guarantee against moth damage is to be sure every garment is cleaned or washed before storing it for summer.

Pick the coolest, dryest storage area available. If moisture is a problem in the closet used for storage, try to keep the air circulating around the clothes with the occasional use of a fan.

Do not hang knits. Rather, store them folded in a drawer so that they don't stretch out of shape.

Storing Woolens

With the arrival of warm weather, most persons have or are in the process of putting away their winter clothing. They should remember to clean their woolen garments before storage.

The instructions on the label should give the care cue. Also, there are some common-sense rules that should be followed.

First, identify and treat any stains on the items. Then, if the garments are labeled "machine washable," set the washing machine on the gentle cycle, using lukewarm water and a mild soap or detergent.

If the detergent is of the powdered variety, make certain it is dissolved completely before adding the items.

Garments labeled "superwash" can go right from the washing machine into the dryer. Otherwise, remove the woven wools immediately when washed, rinse and hang them carefully on a good hanger with the zippers zipped and the buttons buttoned.

If drying outdoors, keep the woolens in a shady place.

If the label says the woolens are "hand washable", use a mild soap, preferably liquid with cold or lukewarm water. Squeeze the wash water gently through the fabric until clean.

Rinse thoroughly in water that is the same temperature as the wash water, changing the water as many times as necessary. Never wring water from wool.

The water should be squeezed out carefully; then quickly roll the item in a towel to absorb as much water as possible before drying.

If "dry cleaning only" is what the label recommends on the wool garment, trust it to a good cleaner. Identify any spots or stains so the dry cleaner will know how to treat them.

'Hearts' plan to party

The Young Hearts Club will have a Tacky Party on June 22 beginning at 10:30 a.m. in the homes of Grover and Neola Smith and Ralph Barlow and Helen Gunter.

Members are asked to 'dress tacky' and bring a covered dish. Beverages will be furnished by the club. Lunch will be served at 1 p.m.

First and second prizes will be given for the tackiest outfit. Come and join the fun with games and music.

Moon retires from Revco

By FRANCES PAULETTE

On Saturday, May 28, Roy Moon, pharmacist with Revco Drug Co. in Appomattox, took off his white coat, walked out of the drug store to enjoy the retirement he's earned.

"The field of Pharmacy has been good to me," said Moon, an Appomattox County native, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W.A. Moon.

Moon, who has thirty years with the Revco Company, 20 of those years in Appomattox, is married to the former Gladys DeWitt of Bedford County, a registered nurse.

"A pharmacist's wife has to be the most patient person in the world," said Moon with a laugh, "the hours we keep and the uncertainty of our schedules makes meal planning and taking part in social activities quite a chore."

Moon, living in the Spout Spring area as a child, attended grade school at Spout Spring and came to the Appomatox County public school system in the seventh grade. He graduated from Appomattox High School in 1940.

At the beginning of World War II, Moon went to St. Juliens Creek Ammunition Depot for the Norfolk Navy Yard. In the fall of 1943 he volunteered for service in the U. S. Maritime Service.

"Following basic training in New York, I went from New York across country by train to San Francisco and my first voyage out of the country was to New Guinea on a troop ship. I was working in the engine room," commented Moon.

Moon's travels with the Maritime Service took him to many countries.

"The war ended in Europe while I was in Russia," said Moon. "I came home and Gladys and I were married in 1945. I made one trip, came home and attended Officers School at New London, Connecticut and got my commission. Next I took the Coast Guard examination and attended Diesel School at Sheeps Head Bay."

Moon was discharged in August of 1946 and entered VPI to begin his studies in pre-pharmacy. He entered the Medical College School of Pharmacy in 1947 completing his work in 1950.

As pharmacist, Moon went to Gray's Drug Store in Farmville, then to Rivermont Avenue Pharmacy, Patterson Drug Store on Main Street and on Norfolk Avenue also in Lynchburg. In 1958 Patterson opened a new store in Roanoke and Moon was sent there from 1958 until 1963.

When the Patterson Drug Company bought the Spencer Drug Store in Appomattox, Moon came to Appomattox to work for Patterson.

Revco bought the Patterson chain of stores in 1967; Revco now has in excess of 1700 stores.

"I've seen a lot of changes in pharmacy," said Moon, "a large percentage of drugs that are used today were non-existent when I started as a pharmacist."

Moon and his wife have two children, Robert, a silversmith; and Martha, a nurse.

The Moons belong to the Memorial United Methodist Church where he serves as member of the board of trustees and teaches Sunday School. He enjoys tennis and woodworking.

"I would like to express my appreciation to the people of this community who have supported me during the past 20 years I have worked in Appomattox. I appreciate your patronage and your understanding," commented Moon who plans to pursue his hobbies, travel a bit and just relax.
